Trick a Passenger Played Upon Grouty Railroad Official.

At a station on one of our great railroad lines there is a gate-man noted for his gruffness. One day there came a man who lived on the line and had an annual ticket. The gate man always passed this passenger without troubling him to show the ticket; but one day, being more than usually gruff, he ordered him to produce it, adding, in a severe tone: "Mind, I want to see this every time you take a trais." A week later, at two o'clock in the morning, the gate-man was aroused from a sound slumber by a ring at the door bell. Looking out of the window, he saw a man in a great state of excite ment. "Come down, quick!" he cried. "Railroad business!" The official burried on his clothes and came down to "I want you to look at this the door. ticket," said the visitor. "I'm going on the three a. m. train, and you said you wanted to see the ticket every time." The gate-man uttered an exclamation of rage, and slammed the door, without even glancing at the ticket; and, furthermore, he never afterward asked to see it at the gate.

I commenced to use tobacco when I was only il years old, and have never been able to give up the habit until I took Narcoti-Cure, although I have tried other so-called remedles without effect. After using your remedy four days, all "hankering" for chewing disappeared, and in four days more smoking became unpleasant. GREAT TREE, GREATER FAKE Solving the Mystery of the Tree of Thibet's The legend-smashing of the present day seems to go hand in hand with the record-breaking. Few people have heard of the marvelous tree of Thibet, but, nevertheless, for a long time it has enjoyed a great reputation in the east. It is a sacred tree, and not long ago there was an account in some of the English and French papers of the fabulous prices which were paid for a few of its leaves.

In his "Souvenirs de Voyage au Thibet," Pere Hue speaks of this wonderful tree. It is essentially of a literary and artistic turn of mind, and has the strange habit of producing images and hieroglyphics upon its leaves. bometimes religious figures take the places of the letters. Pere Hue called the mysterious thing tree of one thousand images." These stems, and on the trunk. Near the temple of Buddha, in the village of Liousar, Thibet, this great tree has stood for years, the plague and the puzzie of all the botanists who have never received the gift of faith. In 1891 Mr. William Rockhill, on a trip from China, started out to see this famous tree. He went to Liousar, a village of about eight hundred inhabitants and possessing an immense lamanerie. It shelters about three thousand lamas, or Buddhist priests. These priests have several temples, in the largest of which, upon the throne of three meters, is the statue of Buddha, which is said to be of solid pure gold. At precisely ten meters from this temple the famous tree flourishes. But Rockhill came away from there just as ignorant as he had arrived. It was in February and the tree had no leaves Hard luck for Rockhill! "Pil try it again," said he; and he afterward asserted, wherever he went, that the tree of one thousand images was a reality-and there was some truth in what he said.

But at last Monsignore Biet, of the foreign mission, and apostolic vicar of Thibet, has just handed over the key on a pilgrimage, became sick, and, on sar it is necessary to have recourse to
